Dissertation Writing Awards

- 137 individuals have received dissertation writing awards that aim to support doctoral candidates while they complete their dissertations toward getting a PhD, including over 20 in the last four years.
- Nearly 90 went on to professorial or equivalent positions at universities and other institutions of higher education – over 70 scholars at 60 institutions in the United States, 5 institutions in Turkey, and 15 elsewhere in the world.
- An additional 12 individuals who received this award went on to senior research, curatorial, or other positions at US think tanks, museums, and libraries relevant to the qualifications and experiences they gained through the Turkish/Ottoman studies that ITS supported.
- This ITS support helped add tremendous breadth and depth to US higher education on Turkey and top-level American scholarly expertise in studies pertaining to it.

(Format Note: Each listing below provides the dissertation writing award recipient's name, his/her university affiliation at the time of application for the award, the tentative dissertation title at that time, and the academic year for which the award was granted, followed by similar title and year designation for any other ITS awards or grants and, finally, the most recent academic or other professional affiliation identified for the individual in question.)

Partial List of Academic Institutions Supported by Dissertation Writing and Other Awardees and by Library and New Teaching Position Grants

- ITS grants have provided new scholars, supported existing ones, and added to universities' resource base in Turkish and Ottoman history, politics, economics, sociology, anthropology, arts and literature, language study, and other relevant fields at nearly 240 institutions of higher education.
- This includes nearly 200 colleges and universities throughout the United States – in 45 of the 50 states and the District of Columbia, moving well beyond a pre-ITS core that largely confined Turkish studies to a handful of Ivy League institutions, the University of Chicago, the University of California, Berkeley, and the like.
